Continuing Care Retirement Communities

A continuing care retirement community (CCRC) allows senior adults, usually age 55 and older, to “age in place,” with independent living, assisted living, and skilled nursing home care in a tiered approach. Those who are healthy and active choose independent living at the outset, and transition to assisted living and then to skilled nursing home care as need arises. Contract agreements vary considerably among CCRCs, as described in the three most typical types noted below. Price depends on the size of residence chosen, the number of occupants in the unit, and the type of contract selected. Entrance fees can differ considerably among CCRCs, and they also vary according to provisions for refund when this is included in the contract. If the entrance fee is only partially refundable, it will tend to be lower. In some cases, there are additional fees for meals, housekeeping, transportation, and social activities.

There are three main types of CCRC contracts. These three do not, however, encompass all of the contract types offered by CCRCs.

1. A Type A contract requires an up-front entrance fee, which may or may not be refundable. If the fee is non-refundable, it tends to be lower than a contract offering a full or partial refund at the time of death. Type A contracts are the most common, and in addition to the up-front fee, there is a monthly fee based on the size of the apartment and the number of occupants. The entrance fee and the monthly fee generally guarantee all amenities and needed health services for the resident’s lifetime.

2. Type B is a Modified contract. It is similar to a Type A contract, except that only some health services are included, usually for a specified time period in the nursing home facility. If more health services are needed subsequently, market rates are charged, although the charges may also be at rates lower than those for non-residents. The additional costs are added to the monthly fee.

3. Type C is a Fee-for-Service contract. Shelter, residential services and amenities, and sometimes health care in emergency situations, are included. A lower initial entrance fee is charged, and payment at market rates is typically required for all health services as they are needed.

Some CCRCs offer a Type D contract. It is a Rental Agreement. There is little or no entrance fee, and market rates are charged for access to services as needed.

Pennsylvania and New Jersey require owners of CCRCs to register their facility with the state and provide a Disclosure Statement which describes services provided, contract terms, and financial stability. Those intending to sign a contract with a CCRC are advised to consult the Disclosure Statement before doing so.

Resources on CCRCs

A. The Pennsylvania Insurance Department lists all registered CCRCs in Pennsylvania on its website, https://www.insurance.pa.gov/Coverage/ContinuingCare/Pages/default.aspx. Look at
B. The Pennsylvania Department of Health website, http://sais.health.pa.gov/commonpoc/nhLocatorie.asp, allows one to search by county or name of the CCRC. CCRCs which provide skilled nursing care are listed. For each facility, one can look at the most recent inspection report that describes the environment, staffing, comparison with others in the state, and issues.

C. The New Jersey Department of Community Affairs website provides information about CCRCs in the state. Go to https://www.state.nj.us/dca/divisions/codes/offices/ccrc.html and click on Continuing Care Retirement Communities, A Consumer Guidebook. The guidebook can be downloaded as a pdf. It has a list of CCRCs by county with contact information, and it has a list of information sources. Disclosure Statements can be obtained directly from the CCRCs.

D. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid (CMS) is the federal agency responsible for assuring quality in facilities that provide long term care services under Medicare and/or Medicaid. NursingHomeCompare is the federal database reporting the status of all licensed nursing facilities in the U.S. that participate in Medicare and Medicaid. It is available at https://www.medicare.gov/nursinghomecompare/search.html. The skilled nursing component of a CCRC is included in the database (but a CCRC that accepts only private pay residents may not be included). It may be easiest to search by state and facility name. The page for each facility gives access to a general description, type of facility, ownership, citations, etc. The tabs across the top can be opened to reveal a great amount of detail about the results of recent health and safety inspections, staffing, and quality measures for both short stay and long stay residents. CMS also offers several documents which explain the quality system in place for long term care facilities. See https://www.cms.gov/Medicare/Provider-Enrollment-and-Certification/CertificationandCompliance/index.html for a document explaining the Certification and Compliance System, and https://www.cms.gov/Medicare/Provider-Enrollment-and-Certification/CertificationandCompliance/FSQRS.html for a description of the Five Star Rating System.

E. CARF International (Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities) is the only accreditior of CCRCs. In 2013 CARF acquired the original CCRC accreditation system, initially developed in 1985 and operated by the American Association of Homes and Services for the Aging (now known as LeadingAge). On CARF’s home page, http://www.carf.org/home, click on the Public tab. To find CCRCs in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware, click on Find an Accredited Provider, and then Use Advanced Search. Select the state in the State/Province menu, followed by Continuing Care Retirement Community in the Program menu. The link http://www.carf.org/Resources/RetirementLiving will take you to several informative CCRC resources. These include guides such as How to Select a CCRC, Consumer Guide to Understanding Financial Performance and Reporting in CCRCs, and CCRCs: Weighing the Risks.
The following pages describe 16 CCRCs in the Philadelphia area, many of which have or have recently had Penn personnel as residents. The table at the end shows the number of apartments, number of assisted living units, number of cottage units, number of skilled care beds, and the number of residents for each facility. Prices and details do change over time, and readers should contact the individual CCRCs for up-to-date figures.

The initial report on CCRCs, completed in 2014, was prepared by Howard Goldfine, James Saunders, and Heidi George. This update, compiled by Paul Shaman, adds two CCRCs in Philadelphia, Simpson House and Watermark at Logan Square, to the original 14, and the introductory section describing the types of CCRCs and listing web resources.

Medford Leas is under the aegis of The Estaugh, a not for profit corporation founded by Quakers in 1914. There are two campuses, one in Medford, New Jersey and a second five miles away, in Lumberton, New Jersey. The Medford campus began operation in 1971, spans 168 acres, and is located in the Barton Arboretum and Nature Preserve, which consists of landscaped grounds, meadows, woodlands, and recreational areas. Lumberton Leas covers 88 acres and started in 1999. It features landscaped grounds, meadows, and wooded areas. Residents are able to use amenities in both campuses, and transportation between the two is available. Assisted living and skilled nursing care are provided only on the Medford campus.

On the Medford campus there are studio and one- and two-bedroom garden apartments, many linked to the community building by enclosed walkways; one- and two-bedroom patio homes; and one-, two-, and three-bedroom townhomes. The Lumberton campus has 110 townhomes with one-, two-, and three-bedroom options.

The Lumberton campus has an occupancy agreement, and there are plans to establish one also at the Medford campus. Entrance fees start at $105,000 and monthly charges begin at $2,044. The charge for a reservation is $1,250 for one person and $2,500 for two persons. For detailed information about entrance fees and other aspects of pricing, use the website to contact Medford Leas.

www.simpsonhouse.org

Simpson House is located on Belmont Avenue in Philadelphia, across from the Bala Golf Club and a half mile from Fairmount Park. Established in 1865, it is the oldest CCRC in the world and is not-for-profit. Originally called the Methodist Episcopal Home for the Aged, it experienced several name changes until it was renamed Simpson House in 1972. Bishop Matthew Simpson was a well-known religious leader in Philadelphia and an adviser to President Abraham Lincoln.

Residence options are studio and one- and two-bedroom apartments. The Olde Main Building, which is designed in the English Gothic style, opened in 1899. The recently dedicated Cornerstone Expansion has added 37 apartments, new dining venues, and a fitness center.

Simpson House is a Type C facility. Entrance fees range from $43,000 to $95,000 for Olde Main and from $127,000 to $300,000 for Cornerstone. Monthly rental fees are from $2,250 to $3,400 for Olde Main and from $3,000 to $3,750 for Cornerstone. With personal care added the monthly fees range from $4,500 to $6,500. The cost of skilled nursing $315 per day. The reservation deposit is $1,000 and is refundable. In mid-summer 2019 a rental contract option will also become available.

Simpson House holds music concerts and has a resident choir. It hosts Catholic mass and Methodist, Baptist, and Jewish services. Reduced fee membership is offered at the Bala Golf Club and at LA Fitness, nearby. Simpson House has available parking and is pet friendly.

Nearby hospitals are Lankenau, Penn Presbyterian, and Jefferson University.
